The internet is a global construct. It should not be subject to the laws or whims of only one nation. The FCC may control the wires and air waves in the US, but it should not control the packets.